

I have the right to know.

Oil, gas, and mining companies must respect that right.

Information about oil, gas, and mining projects can be hard to come by. Too often, companies don't disclose their payments to governments in the countries where they operate. Where secrecy prevails, the whole industry suffers, putting company investments at risk and raising energy prices for consumers. Lack of transparency allows mismanagement and corruption to flourish and prevents funds from reaching poor communities.

The Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act (H.R. 6066) requires companies to disclose their payments to governments, providing the information communities need to claim their fair share of profits.

Support the right to know. Support the Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act.

As part of our commitment to communities affected by oil, gas, and mining operations, Oxfam America is calling on companies to respect the rights of poor people and contribute to the long-term reduction of poverty. Go to: www.oxfamamerica.org/rights-resources.

I have the right to know.

Oil, gas, and mining companies must respect that right.

Information about oil, gas, and mining projects can be hard to come by. Too often, companies don't disclose their payments to governments in the countries where they operate. Where secrecy prevails, the whole industry suffers, putting company investments at risk and raising energy prices for consumers. Lack of transparency allows mismanagement and corruption to flourish and prevents funds from reaching poor communities.

The Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act (H.R. 6066) requires companies to disclose their payments to governments, providing the information communities need to claim their fair share of profits.

Support the right to know. Support the Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act.

As part of our commitment to communities affected by oil, gas, and mining operations, Oxfam America is calling on companies to respect the rights of poor people and contribute to the long-term reduction of poverty. Go to: www.oxfamamerica.org/rights-resources.

I have the right to know.

Oil, gas, and mining companies must respect that right.

Information about oil, gas, and mining projects can be hard to come by. Too often, companies don't disclose their payments to governments in the countries where they operate. Where secrecy prevails, the whole industry suffers, putting company investments at risk and raising energy prices for consumers. Lack of transparency allows mismanagement and corruption to flourish and prevents funds from reaching poor communities.

The Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act (H.R. 6066) requires companies to disclose their payments to governments, providing the information communities need to claim their fair share of profits.

Support the right to know. Support the Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act.

As part of our commitment to communities affected by oil, gas, and mining operations, Oxfam America is calling on companies to respect the rights of poor people and contribute to the long-term reduction of poverty. Go to: www.oxfamamerica.org/rights-resources.

I have the right to know.

Oil, gas, and mining companies must respect that right.

Information about oil, gas, and mining projects can be hard to come by. Too often, companies don't disclose their payments to governments in the countries where they operate. Where secrecy prevails, the whole industry suffers, putting company investments at risk and raising energy prices for consumers. Lack of transparency allows mismanagement and corruption to flourish and prevents funds from reaching poor communities.

The Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act (H.R. 6066) requires companies to disclose their payments to governments, providing the information communities need to claim their fair share of profits.

Support the right to know. Support the Extractive Industries Transparency Disclosure Act.

As part of our commitment to communities affected by oil, gas, and mining operations, Oxfam America is calling on companies to respect the rights of poor people and contribute to the long-term reduction of poverty. Go to: www.oxfamamerica.org/rights-resources.

